From Regional Roastery to Global Coffee Exporter

CONTEXT

Founded in 2015 in Bandar Lampung, Dr. Koffie grew from a local coffee roastery into a producer and exporter that processes more than 10,000 metric tons a year.

Big Operations, Outdated Sales Materials

THE GAP

Dr. Koffie had large facilities and direct farmer networks across West Lampung. But its old sales materials could not win institutional buyers overseas.

01

The Commodity Image ↗

Robusta has long been seen as low-grade filler. Dr. Koffie had to show that its specialty Robusta cups well, with notes of caramel, brown sugar and dark chocolate.

02

Scattered Information ↗

Key specs, defect limits and export terms were spread across spreadsheets, loose PDFs and chat messages.

03

Not Enough Credibility ↗

The old leaflets looked like retail flyers. They did not show the stability and quality control that multi-container buyers expect.

Buyers Read the Numbers, So the Numbers Lead

DESIGN DIRECTION

International coffee buyers skip the marketing language. They check defect counts, screen sizes, moisture limits, shipping schedules and where the beans come from.

GRADE 1	GRADE 3	GRADE 4B	MOISTURE
11	44	80	13%
DEFECT MAX	DEFECT MAX	DEFECT MAX	MAX TOLERANCE

Clear Grid

Short, scannable data blocks replace long paragraphs, so executives can review quickly at the negotiation table.

↗

Data First

The key export figures (screen size, moisture limit and grade) are the biggest things on the page.

↗

Plain Origin Story

Documentary photos from West Lampung sit beside simple type, showing where the coffee comes from without over-selling it.
